Deitz and His Struggle With the Lumber Companies There is an instinct, well nigh indestructible, enthroned in the human breast, which we commonly name justice or fair play. As this instinct has been dominant in human affairs, has humanity progressed and prospered; and. on the other hand, wherever and to the extent that this innate demand for justice and fair play has been denied, has humanity suffered and deteriorated. The basic foundation of our government rests on that demand. Our Declaration of Independence in revolutionary terms voices it. Our federal constitution and all the constitutions of the several states, that of Wisconsin included, as well as all other statutory laws, both state and national, are framed with that fundamental end in view. All their injunctions, prohibitions and punitive provisions have been professedly passed for the purpose of insuring, protecting and safeguarding this innate claim to justice and fair play under all conditions to all and every human being living within the boundaries of these United States of America. It is in the name of this basic right of humanity, on the strength of its recognition in all our legislation, that Deitz friends demand a fair trial; it is to this spirit in America that Mr. Deitz and his family, and we who are pleading their cause, are directing our appeal to secure it for him.
