Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Hay-Field Helen and Eva Stanley were sitting at work, one fine summer s evening, while their mamma was reading aloud to them the History of England, when Susan, the housemaid, entered the room, and said, If you please, ma am, Mrs. Burke sends her compliments to you, and will be glad if you will allow the young ladies to drink tea, and spend to-morrow evening with the Miss Burkes. The grass is all cut in the meadows by the river-side, and hay-making is just going to begin; and Martha tells me, ma am, that there will be a large party of young ladies and gentlemen; and a tent is to be put up, and the company are to sup in the hay-field, and there will be a great feast. Martha says, - too but she bid me not tell - that her mistress thinks about having the village band to play. Jones has been ordered to send a dozen dishes of strawberries; a bowl full of cream is ordered from Woodman s; and Martha is gone up to Sweet s after more cakes, and she will call for the answer as she comes back.
