BARRIERS FOR WOMEN IN COMPUTING

2003. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. 282 The way that computing is presented and taught in schools has a major impact on girls third level choice and can motivate them to either choose computing or reject it as a career choice. Girls interest in communication, group work and social usefulness needs to be stimulated by presenting computing as a communication too and emphasising its social dimensions, as well as its technical possibilities, within the educational curriculum. This book aimed to identify...
