Not illustrated. 1910 Excerpt: .life; it tends to break up unsocial and anti-social tendencies. Its very erection is a form of cooperation, which makes easier other cooperative efforts. And it is proper to say here that unless the consolidated school tends to make the economic life of the community profitable, while it is raising the intellectual and moral life, it is failing to fulfill one of its chiefest missions. Country life must be made economically profitable, else the country districts will be depopulated. It is as much the duty of the educational department as it is of the agricultural department of the state to help make it economically profitable; and the consolidated school is the best center from which to accomplish this vital work. But to make country life economically profitable and yet to permit it to remain socially unattractive will not stop the movement from the country to the...
